EVOLUTION MARTIAL ARTS

THE REVOLUTION #19 – NOVEMBER 2008

Don't play the blame game. If your child loses in the game, match or event, don't blame the referee, the weather, etc., just say "You did your best" and be proud. No one can take away your child's talent & effort. Their abilities will always show in spite of obstacles or 'Questionable' calls. In life, there is always going to be human error. Blaming sends the message you are deflecting responsibility. Your child works all night on a homework project and just as they finish the computer crashes. Although it's not the child's fault, they still have to get the project done. If the child's parents play the blame game, what do you think they will do? There are many cases in the news where a child has acted out in a serious way at school, been suspended. How do the parents act? Shame? Anger at their child? No, they blame the school! One of life's most important lessons is take responsibility for your own actions. Parents you are your child's greatest role model. "You have no control over what others do. You only have control over what you do!"
